

Dameion King

I am a 37 year old lifelong Richmond resident, who's experienced the tragedy, turbulence, triumph, and truth that make up some of our community's rich history. While attending Contra Costa College, I majored in Health and Human Services. I've served on the Richmond Housing Authority's Advisory Committee and as the chair of Marin Clean Energy's Community Leadership Advisory Group. I've served as an urban strategy consultant for several local non profits, CBO's and civic groups throughout the Bay Area. I'm also a Hard Skills Development Specialist for Rubicon Programs and the current President of The Redemption Center, a local civic organization that exists to promote social welfare within urban communities. I passionately believe our community deserves leadership that educates, equips, and empowers its citizens.

Our city is in a unique period of healthy transition which calls for leadership that understands and appreciates the commonality of humanity, the importance of a well diverse business community, culturally competent public safety policies and adequate affordable housing for our residents. I will labor to promote tolerance, social entrepreneurship and innovative business development that will encourage profits and hard skills development for workers in the immediate community. I will work toward enriched dialogue and increased communication between community and law enforcement in addition to advocating for service enriched housing models. I, Dameion King, would like to serve the community of Richmond.

Richmond is not only a city of pride and purpose. It's also a city of redemption.
